Annualised volatility: risk is measured by the variability of performance. The higher the standard deviation, the greater the variability (and therefore the risk) of the Fund or the index.

Portfolio Manager commentary

Global equities kicked off October with a strong rally, shrugging off the US government shutdown and signs of cooling labour markets. Investors looked past the noise, focusing instead on resilient K-shaped consumption, rising productivity, and strong corporate earnings. Valuations, high but justified, held firm as markets digested a backdrop of increasingly accommodative monetary and fiscal policy. Healthcare led early gains, rebounding sharply after a year of regulatory uncertainty, as new guidance from Washington lifted an overhang on the sector.

Mid-month, the fragile truce between the US and China unravelled, reigniting tensions over rare-earths and AI-critical supply chains. Threats of tariffs and export controls sent a jolt through tech-heavy markets: US technology fell sharply, Chinese equities declined, and cyclical sectors bore the brunt, while defensives held their ground. The flare-up, though dramatic, was temporary and markets quickly rebounded.

Financials briefly hit the spotlight as well, with the bankruptcies of Tricolor and First Brands raising questions about the shadow banking system and private credit. Still, broader credit markets held firm, with high-yield spreads staying far from crisis territory. Major banks, robustly capitalised and battle-tested, demonstrated that the system built post-Global Financial Crisis remains resilient. Even amid these minor shocks, government bonds offered refuge, with UK gilts rallying on signs of slowing wage growth.

By month-end, disinflationary signals gave markets further support. UK inflation eased sharply, prompting an increase in expectations of Bank of England rate cuts and driving gains in small and mid-cap equities as well as Gilts. US inflation also softened, reinforcing hopes for Federal Reserve (Fed) easing. Megacap US technology stocks closed the month close to fresh all-time highs, delivering record earnings and driving unprecedented concentration in the index.

The Fed, constrained by a fog of missing data due to the government shutdown, moved cautiously toward a more accommodative stance. October leaves markets at a moment where overarching optimism meets vigilance, amidst lofty valuations, episodic bouts of volatility and softening macro data.
