Portfolio Manager commentary

Global equities continued their march higher through September, defying the month's bearish reputation. Investors looked past political distractions, including the US government shutdown, and focused instead on the bigger picture: resilient growth, robust earnings and a more accommodative policy backdrop.

The recession narrative has faded. Strong corporate profits, solid consumption and rising productivity all support the view that the soft landing has been achieved. Valuations remain elevated, with the US 500 trading at 23x forward earnings, but the rally has broadened beyond the mega-caps. Earnings momentum is improving across mid and small caps.

The US Federal Reserve (Fed) delivered its first rate cut of the cycle, trimming rates by 0.25% to 4.00–4.25%. Officially, the decision reflected softer employment data and easing inflation pressures. Market pricing now implies a further 50bps of easing by year-end. For equities, that combination of solid earnings and easier policy remains powerful fuel.

UK gilts entered September under pressure as long-dated yields briefly hit levels not seen since the 1990s before Bank of England (BoE) Governor Andrew Bailey stepped in to calm nerves. He argued that the sell-off in long bonds had been overdone, hinting that the Bank could scale back quantitative tightening if needed.

The structural backdrop for gilts has turned less favourable as defined benefit pension demand fades and new issuance remains heavy. Each move higher in yields tightens the UK's fiscal arithmetic, keeping pressure on the Government ahead of November's Budget. Despite these factors UK Gilts found support through a broad global bond market rally helped by supportive comments from BoE Governor Bailey.

Credit markets remained notably resilient. Global investment grade spreads tightened to circa 0.70%, the lowest since 2007, supported by healthy balance sheets and strong demand. With all-in yields still attractive and default risk contained, the technical backdrop remains supportive - though, as with equities, further gains will depend on the macro picture staying benign.

Gold closed at new a high of US$3859/oz in September, extending its extraordinary run. The move reflects both safe-haven demand and growing investor appetite for hard assets in a world of expansive fiscal policy.
